THE PRICE OF COAL

The price of coal is a subject of much interest to the people of this section. The price of coal has been steadily increasing for some time past, and it is expected that it will continue to do so for some time to come. The price of coal is a factor in the cost of living, and it is one of the things that the people of this section are most concerned about.

LOOKING OUT FOR AMERICANS.

It is announced that hereafter the State Department desires to be informed whenever Americans propose to travel abroad or in any way to assume interests in foreign countries, the reason given being that this administration does not propose to consider an American who engages in foreign business and development as beyond the pale of diplomatic protection. In short, the American flag is going to stand for American rights, and an American whose foreign interests are in strict accord with honor and justice to the United States, and in line with the laws of the country in which he is operating, as well as with international law, may depend on his government to see that he is not made a pariah in a foreign land.

PEAVINE CANYON HAS PROMISING PROPERTY

A L. Chappell of Reno received a check last week from Pittsburgh, eastern office of the Peavine Silver Corporation, for $6250 to meet a payment due on the purchase of the Peavine mine. Another payment of like amount is due in 60 days. The Peavine is the "high-grade" mine of silver ore 30 years ago. Chappell secured an option on the mine after crawling through the old workings and sampling the ore left in the old stopes. He sank a shaft to the hanging wall of the vein which was out about 70 feet deeper than the old workings, and recently transferred his option to the new corporation, which is being financed in the east. The mine joins the Standard Metals and the course of the vein is through that property.

EQUINOX WILL OCCUR COMING OF NEW DAY

The equinox will occur tomorrow, and autumn is at hand. This is the day that occurs twice a year when the day and night are of equal length, of 12 hours. The sun is ascending six hours and descending in the same time. In other words, the sun is on the equator and when in this position the horizon of every place is divided into two equal parts by the circle bounding light and darkness, hence the sun is visible everywhere for 12 hours.

LOCAL OPERATOR EXAMINES A MINE IN DEATH VALLEY

Harry C. Stimler, accompanied by E. G. Pickett, mining engineer, will leave tomorrow morning for Shoshone, California, where an examination of the Ashford gold mine will be made. Mr. Stimler is negotiating for the purchase of this property for a reported consideration of $150,000.

The Ashford property is located 24 miles west of Shoshone and in the heart of Death Valley. The richness of the mine has long been known, and quantities of ore are occasionally extracted that show liberally of free gold and worth as high as $7 a pound.

The group consists of 12 claims, and has been developed by over 4000 feet of underground work, with the deepest workings being 200 feet. Numerous quantities of mill ore are all to be exposed throughout the various workings, all being free building.

The holdings are equipped with modern machinery, including compressor plant, substantial buildings for the accommodation of the mine, while three miles to the east of the main shaft there is an up-to-date mill with a capacity of 50 tons daily. The mill was built near a well where a good flow of water was developed, although the water is unfit for domestic use. Water for domestic purposes must be secured from Scotty's springs, which lie about six miles distant. In the event the deal is finally concluded, it is the intention of Mr. Stimler and associates to put in a pipe line for conveying water to the mine, and also to construct an aerial tramway that will have a length of a little over a mile to transport the ore from the mine to the mill.

The Ashford property is owned by three brothers of that name, and they have carried forward development for a great many years. Occasional shipments have been made, and now and then the mill is brought into commission for the treatment of a certain tonnage of ore, the proceeds being used to further exploit the property.

Mr. Pickett, who was formerly associated with the Utah Consolidated Copper company, gives it as his opinion that the Ashford property is the biggest and richest little mine that was ever called to his notice. He says it possesses wonderful possibilities for becoming a high-grade producer of the yellow metal in great quantities. So much faith has he in the holdings that he has taken an option on an adjoining property for a group of Portland men.

RANDELL GETS OFF WRONG.

Senator Joseph R. Randell, of Montana, president of the National Merchant Marine association, went off half-cocked recently in a letter to the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati. This chamber, by the way, is heading its movement on the part of business men's associations all over the country to support and maintain the merchant marine.

When the merchant marine law was put upon the statute books in June, 1920, it was hailed as a great triumph for the new American merchant marine. But, as a matter of fact, when the new shipping board recently took office all the outstanding features of the law so far as positive action is concerned, had been left a dead letter.

It was President Wilson who refused to execute the provisions of the Jones merchant marine law, and for this he was roundly criticized by President Harding in his pre-election speech at Baltimore, and again in Omaha.

Senator Randell then complains because of the sale by the shipping board recently of wooden ships at $2100 each, "which cost the taxpayers upward of $500,000 each to build." But he should recall that when his own party was in power an offer of $30,000,000 for these wooden ships was spurned.

To the credit of the senior senator from Louisiana, however, he is said that he is a staunch supporter of the American merchant marine whenever that subject is before congress, and it is only during off days that he selects a belaying-pin from that subject to shy at the Republican party.
